WITHDRAWAL OF JAPANESE FROM LEAGUE FORESEEN

Seems Inevitable As Cabinet
Conducts A Meeting

INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN

To Give Final Decision On
Attempts to End
Conflict

By James R. Young
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

TOKYO, Feb. 1.—(INS)—Japanese withdrawal from the League of Nations appeared almost inevitable today as the cabinet met to render its final decision on league attempts to end the Sino-Japanese Manchurian conflict.

It was patent that resistance to the league policy of stating its views on the dispute had reached high pitch as Count Yasuya Uchida, foreign minister, reported to the cabinet the results of his conference with Prince Kimmochi Saionji, last of the elder statesmen.

Yosuke Matsunaka, Japanese delegate to the league, will receive instructions as soon as they are adopted by the cabinet. International News Service learned on high authority. These instructions are:

1. Tokyo is prepared to continue negotiations of the Manchurian dispute through the league provided conciliation can be obtained by application of paragraph 3, article 15, of the league covenant.

2. The league's policy of non-recognition of the Manchukuo government in Manchuria is not consistent with the demands of the Japanese people.

3. Final conciliation of the conflict must be reached only through direct negotiation between China and Japan.

4. Japan refuses to recognize the right of non-member nations to participate in league conciliation attempts.

5. If the foregoing points are acceptable to the league, Japan will concede to certain minor points.

6. Should the committee of nineteen of the league apply paragraph 4, article 15, of the league covenant to final league action in the dispute, "there will be nothing for Japan to do."

Home Town League Will Benefit Bristol Residents

An association of Bristol merchants in all lines of business, banded together in a common cause, and to be known as the Home Town League, has been inaugurated by the Bristol Courier.

These merchants, including grocers, meat market operators, hardware merchants, those having clothing and furniture stores, and gasoline service stations are included as members.

This group by buying and selling products of manufacturers who directly or indirectly help Bristol will help the community.

Bristol residents are asked to look for the sign of the Home Town League on the windows of the league stores, purchase there, and thus help not only themselves but benefit the entire community.

Bristol is on dress parade, and those who have joined the Home Town League in an effort to benefit the people of Bristol and manufacturers who help this borough ask that the populace patronize the Home Town League stores. It's a matter of civic pride, the power that has built this town.

By working thus for a common cause, with "Co-operation" as a watch-word, advancement to a greater degree will be possible. "We must support those who support us; help those who help us; buy from those who buy from us. Our objective is ourselves," is one important paragraph found in the Home Town League advertisement on page four of today's Courier. Get in line to help your neighbors and yourselves.

START BOMB INVESTIGATION

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—United States postal inspectors today actively entered the investigation of the bombing of the home of John M. DiSilvestro, prominent Italian leader, with the discovery that large quantities of dynamite have been stolen from a construction camp and quarries within a 100-mile radius of the city. Fearing that the dynamiting of DiSilvestro's home last Saturday was the beginning of a nation-wide reign of terror against Fascist leaders in this country, Federal authorities extended their search into five adjoining states.

GERMANY SEEKS PEACE

Berlin, Germany, Feb. 1.—With eight persons killed and a score injured in the 48 hours since Adolph Hitler took office as Chancellor, the German government strove for internal peace today by a move to make Vice-Chancellor Franz Von Papen unrestricted dictator of Prussia. Such a step would divest Hitler of a power traditionally held by the Chancellor. Action of the cabinet in deciding to ask President Von Hindenburg to assign this power to Von Papen, added strength to the growing belief that Hitler is destined to be more or less of a figurehead in the new line-up, at the mercy of the ultra-conservatives whom the President installed as ministers when he gave the regular chancellorship to the Nazi leader.

COMMONWEALTH'S LOW BALANCE

Harrisburg, Feb. 1.—The Commonwealth today started a new month in which $9,904,000 in disbursements will be required from a general fund that now contains only $4,870,295, the lowest balance in recent years. Expenditures listed for February include $5,404,000 for fourth class school districts; a monthly payroll of $2,000,000 and the $2,000,000 allotment of Talbot Relief Act funds. Fiscal officers have not decided definitely on a plan to meet the condition.

HOLD "MYSTERIOUS PRISONER"

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—A "mysterious prisoner" believed to be a brother of an attorney, was held incommunicado at City Hall today in connection with the triple murder in a tenderloin district vice den on Thursday last. Accompanied by Addie Davis, a Negro maid, police last night returned to the scene of the slaying to watch the girl re-enact what she saw when the two-gun killer invaded the disorderly house and killed two women and a policeman.

FALLING TREE KILLS CROYDON LAD INSTANTLY

Howard Morrow, 20, Son of
Mrs. Daniel Straub, Meets
Sudden Death

WHILE IN BUSTLETON

CROYDON, Feb. 1.—A 20-year-old youth, a Croydon resident, was instantly killed while assisting in felling a tree at the home of his host in Bustleton yesterday afternoon.

The victim: Howard Morrow, 20, son of Mrs. Daniel Straub, Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Straub had just returned from the funeral of Mr. Straub's mother in Philadelphia late in the afternoon, when news of their son's sudden death reached them.

The fatal accident occurred at the property of John Peters, Bustleton, formerly of Croydon, where young Morrow was visiting. Peters, who is a retired Philadelphia fireman, together with young Morrow and others, were engaged in chopping down a tree. When the tree was about to fall the group hurried from the danger zone, but the tree did not fall in the direction expected, and Morrow, struck on the head, was instantly killed.

The body was taken to a morgue near Bustleton and will be sent here today. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Morrow was boatwain's mate of the Croydon Seascout Ship. In addition to his mother and step-father, the young man is survived by one brother, Lawrence.

LANGHORNE MEETING

LANGHORNE, Feb. 1.—Regular monthly business session of the official board of the M. E. Church and a special session of the Quarterly Conference will be held this evening. Matters of importance will be considered, among which will be choosing of a judge and tellers to elect a lay delegate to the annual conference.

John D. as a Story-Teller

"Once upon a time" goes the story John D. Rockefeller is telling to his great-grandchildren, John and Bessie De Cuevas, who are ardent listeners. Mr. Rockefeller is in excellent health and plays a round every day.

PROTEST AGAINST TWO POST OFFICES CLOSING

Reported That Offices at Erwinna and Uhlertown Will Be Discontinued

CIRCULATE PETITIONS

ERWINNA, Feb. 1.—A storm of protest is issuing from residents of this town and Uhlertown, brought about by the reported plan of the United States Post Office Department to discontinue post offices at these Delaware Valley towns.

A petition of protest was drawn up, and volunteer canvassers have set copies in circulation, hoping to gain sufficient signatures to prove to postal officials that the proposal not only will result in inconvenience, but is also a serious threat to the welfare of mail patrons.

At this time, the Department is considering bids upon a new star route with rural delivery service, through Uhlertown, by way of the back road to Erwinna and Sundale, to Max Burwick's farm, and returning by way of the back and river roads to Frenchtown. However, it is authoritatively learned that the Department may reject these bids and establish a new system.

It is the latter plan, whereby the offices suggested for abandonment would be served by a rural delivery route out of either Ottsville or Pipersville, probably the latter, that is causing the anxiety.

The plan, according to a description of the complaint accompanying the petition offers patrons only one mail a day, whereas they now receive four. This means a day's delay with newspapers, etc., and inconvenience in handling of money orders, parcel post, registered mail and other special mail features.

The proposed route extension is 22 miles across hilly country, mostly over unimproved roads. Excellent mail service of nearly forty years' standing will be disrupted by the plan, residents say. Even telegrams are now dispatched to Uhlertown and Erwinna by the fast mail service, which starts out of Frenchtown within a half-hour of receipt of mails from the trains.

The present star route is served by Charles J. Burgstesser, Erwinna. The postmasters who will lose their job, if the office abandonment proposal goes through are Arthur Williams, Erwinna, and Jonas Sigafos, Uhlertown. Both operate general stores.

MORE SPEED IS GOAL OF NATION'S AIR LINES

Some Companies Announce Big Steps Toward "Beating the Clock"

ONE CUTS SEVEN HOURS

By A. E. Lyons
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 1.—(INS)—Winged Mercury was quite the speed demon in his day but today it appears air transport lines are about to out-distance him.

Speed and more speed seems to be the driving force of the air lines as they seek new and safer means of racing mail, passengers and express across the continent, establishing new records almost daily.

Of the major transport lines, Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., and United Air Lines have announced broad steps forward in "beating the clock" on their coast to coast services.

T&WA has announced a fifteen hour schedule from Los Angeles to New York, with two hours longer required for the East-West trip, slicing more than seven hours from the present schedule. United plans call for a speeding up of existing schedules by at least forty miles an hour.

The new and faster schedules of both lines will be made possible through the acquisition of fleets of higher speed craft capable of clipping off miles at a rate never before achieved by transport ships.

Transcontinental & Western Air will place in operation soon after March 1, fifteen low-winged all-metal ships, capable of cruising at 187 miles an hour and with a maximum speed in excess of 210 miles.

Powered with single Wright engines of 700 horsepower, the planes will be capable of a cruising range of 1,000 miles and a ceiling of 20,000 feet.

The United Air Line ships will be of low-winged, all-metal monoplane type, powered with 250-horsepower supercharged Wasp tri-motors.

Sixteen of the ships will be placed in operation March 15. United has not as yet announced the new schedule it will place into effect other than to state that existing schedules would be stepped up at least forty miles an hour.

The distance from New York to Los Angeles on the Transcontinental route is 2,626 miles. The present schedule, which will be continued separately from the "Blue Ribbon service," as the new service will be known, requires 22 hours, 17 minutes on the west-east flight, and 25 hours, 11 minutes on the east-west journey.

Only one hour will be spent on the ground between the coasts by the aircraft of the Blue Ribbon route, with stops at Columbus, Kansas City and Albuquerque. The present service has stops at Pittsburgh, Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Wichita, Amarillo, Albuquerque and Winslow.

The T&WA machines have passed the experimental stage and their capabilities have been disclosed through the two of the same type which have been constructed and delivered.

One went to Lieut. Com. Frank M. Hawks, noted speed flier, and the other to Bert Balchen, who will pilot the plane for the Lincoln 'Ellsworth expedition to the Antarctic.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, technical advisor of T&WA, will supervise construction of the planes.

THE CLASSIFIED Section offers a complete catalogue of the wants and offers of the people of Bristol and lower Bucks county.

Needlework Guild Is Organized at Croydon

CROYDON, Feb. 1.—A branch of the Needlework Guild of America was formed here last evening when a large group of Croydon women met to consider and discuss the proposition. Organization was perfected and officers named.

The president is Mrs. Harry G. Fredericks; secretary, Mrs. Otto Grupp, Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. George Cornwell; directors, Mrs. Mahlin, Mrs. Alfred Jayne, Mrs. E. Eschbacher, Mrs. T. Dolde, Mrs. J. Labor.

A number of members of Bristol Branch of the Guild were present to assist in the formation of the Croydon branch. These included: Mrs. Henry E. Ancker, president; Mrs. Griffith L. Williams, Mrs. C. L. Anderson, Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes, Mrs. Fred Kring, Mrs. L. C. Spring, Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Mrs. Fred Wallace.

Mrs. F. A. Simons, president of Cornwall's Branch of the Guild, was also present. Mrs. Ancker was in charge of the organization meeting.

The local group will meet each Monday afternoon from one to four o'clock at the basement of Wilkinson Memorial M. E. Church.

"Double-Header" Scheduled For February Assembly

By Joseph A. Loftis
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Feb. 1.—(INS)—A February double-header today was scheduled definitely for Pennsylvania Assembly halls.

With the law and order committee giving the "play ball" command, the Sunday Sports Bill drew a position in the legislative line-up. It was the first piece of major controversial legislation thrown out for the house calendar during the current session.

Sabbath baseball agitators won the first inning after crossing bats for two hours yesterday with blue law advocates. The score was 19 to 6. That, at least, is reputed to have been the vote recorded by the law and order group in its huddle subsequent to the public hearing.

Supporters of the bill were confident today of triumph in the first contest, which may reach a climax in the lower branch next Tuesday. The wind-up in the Senate lacked the same certainty.

Make Plans for Group Institute of W. C. T. U.

CHURCHVILLE, Feb. 1.—Plans for a group institute to be held on February 21 at 2:30 and 8 p. m., in the Churchville Reformed Church, have been made.

Mrs. Alvin Sherbine, Johnstown, national director of child welfare and general secretary of the Y. P. B. of Pennsylvania, will be the guest speaker for the evening session.

The invited unions are Bensalem, Bristol, Fallsington, Hulmeville, Langhorne, Makefield, Richboro, Solebury, Warrington, Wrightstown, Morrisville and Yardley.

Three departments to be presented will be scientific temperance instruction, international relations for peace and child welfare.

BODY FORWARDED FROM TEXAS TO BUCKS COUNTY

Funeral of Mrs. V. S. Danser
Will Occur in Yardley Today

B. & L. ANNUAL SESSION

YARDLEY, Feb. 1.—Funeral services for Mrs. Virginia Scattergood Danser, who died in Houston, Texas, in her 82nd year of age, will be held from the home of her son, Alfred A. Danser, Main street, here this afternoon at 2:30.

Mrs. Danser, who died Saturday, was the daughter of the late Elijah and Phoebe Scattergood, and widow of the late Addison Danser, all lifelong residents of Yardley.

Until six years ago Mrs. Danser spent her entire life in Yardley, when she went to Texas to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Virginia D. Boothe. The only survivors are her son, Alfred, and her daughter, Virginia, and two grandchildren, Lowry and Harriett Danser.

Mrs. Danser was a member of Yardley Civic Club, the W. C. T. U., and the Methodist Church.

Services will be conducted by the Rev. B. Warner Shay, with interment in St. Andrew's Burying ground.

YARDLEY, Feb. 1.—The annual meeting of the Yardley Building and Loan Association will be held in the council chamber Monday night, February 6, at which time a new series will be started. This will be the 28th series.

Nominations have been received for directors to serve for the coming year, and include: Louis M. Pickel, T. Sidney Cadwallader, William J. Mackensen, Louis C. Leedom, Ammon B. Kauffman, David H. Anderson, Charles G. Cadwallader, James A. Dilliplane, Alfred A. Danser, H. Stanley Worthington, Joseph B. Johnson, Jesse E. Harper and William C. Beener.

The stockholders' meeting will be held Monday night in the council chamber at 7:30.

NEWTOWN LEADS DEATH RECORDS, NINE DISTRICTS

Had 32 of the Total of 122
During Past Year in That Section of the County

BIRTHS TOTALLED TEN

NEWTOWN, Feb. 1.—In nine districts in this section of Bucks County, Newtown Borough led the number of deaths, having accounted for 32 of the total of 122. Births in the borough numbered 10 in the year 1932, against 78 in the nine districts in the vicinity.

The report is submitted by Mrs. Lillian O. Cornell, registrar of vital statistics for the districts. There were 44 more deaths in the nine districts during the past twelve months than there were births.

The record shows that Upper Southampton township is the only district in this area where the number of births exceeded the deaths, there having been eight births and nine deaths in that district.

To Warmistown township goes the credit for having the greatest number of births. The record shows that during the past year 16 infants were born in that district. The same township reports 19 deaths.

Ivyland borough has the distinction of having the lowest number of births, only one new arrival having put in its appearance there during the past year. During the same period there were only four deaths in that borough.

Ranking next to Newtown in reference to deaths was Northampton township, where it was reported 18 persons had died during the year. This township reports the birth of 13 infants.

Newtown township had 10 deaths and 6 births and Lower Southampton township reported eight deaths and six births. Wrightstown township lost 11 of its residents through death and gained eight new ones. Upper Makefield township reports 12 deaths and 9 births.

Over 200 Gather To Play Card Games At Benefit

Over 200 people gathered at St. Mark's school hall, last evening to play cards for benefit of school fund. There were 35 tables of pinochle, 16 of "500" and one of bridge, and over 150 prizes awarded.

High scores of each game played were attained by: Pinochle, Joseph Rubino, 859; F. Martin, 850; Mrs. P. Quigley, 846; L. J. Delaney, 792; J. Ennis, Jr., 790; Edward O'Donnell, 709.

"500": Mrs. A. Popkin, 5740; Miss Nan Brennan, 4950; Mrs. H. Goldman, 4500; Miss Bertha Thornton, 4200; Miss Esther Boyle, 4170; Mrs. Ennis, 4120; bridge, Miss Veronica R. Dugan, 2284; Miss Katherine Ferry, 2020.

Refreshments were served, Mrs. A. Barnfield was chairlady.

FRACTURES HIP

CROYDON, Feb. 1.—Tripping in her home Monday night Mrs. Charles Curry, Pennsylvania avenue, sustained a fracture of her hip. She is now in the private hospital of Dr. J. Fred Wagner.

Officers were re-elected at a meeting of Bristol Consolidated Fire Department last evening as follows: President, Clifford L. Anderson; vice-president, John Y. Turner; secretary, Serrill D. Detlefson; treasurer, Jacob Hellman; trustees, John Roberts, Albert Loechner, and Anthony Russo.

A motion was passed that men will be permitted to join the department this year without paying any initiation fee.

BUSINESS WOMAN THWARTS THEFTS BY TWO GYPSIES

Miss Eunice Williams Retrieves $12 and Throws
Woman Out

CAME TO 'BUY FLOWERS'

Is Second Similar Attempt In Two Days Here; First Successful

Two gypsy women were thwarted in an attempt to secure money at the Bristol Flower Growers, here, yesterday, when Miss Eunice Williams, a member of the firm, grabbed the arm of one woman, took the money from the gypsy's hand, and threw her out of the establishment.

Twelve dollars in bills were actually in the gypsy's hand, and she was endeavoring to place it up her sleeve when Miss Williams was successful in retrieving it.

At the time of the visit of the two young members of the tribe in their gay-cooled costumes, Miss Williams and James Schell were the only ones in the place. The "customers" stated they wished to purchase flowers for a big gypsy wedding "out in the country." After remaining for a few minutes and gaining the confidence of the two in charge, the one gypsy placed her hand in the money-drawer when it was opened by Miss Williams, and secured the bills. A tussle ensued, but the Bristol business woman was the victor. When the one gypsy was ungently "landed" outside, the second hurriedly followed.

The second gypsy had also made an attempt to "pick" Mr. Schell's pocket. The two made a get-away in an automobile parked outside.

This is the second attempt during the past two days to secure money at local firms, the first one on Monday evening at Virginia Snow Cleaners and Dyers, Mill street, proving successful. There Mrs. Harry Bauroth, Jackson street, was relieved of a pocketbook containing two diamond rings and two dollars in money, as well as a wrist watch.

Thrills Galore in "Black Swan," Starting Tomorrow

From the thrills of the French Revolution which made his "Scaramouche" the outstanding historical novel of the last decade, Rafael Sabatini has turned his story-telling genius to the most colorful, exciting times in early American history—the buccaneer days of the Spanish Main. The result is his long awaited novel, "The Black Swan," which will be published serially in the Courier beginning tomorrow.

Sabatini is not only a novelist but a noted historian. He was born in Italy and educated in Switzerland and Portugal, trained in bringing to light the buried facts of the past. He has published histories of the Renaissance and of the Spanish Inquisition. But his Latin imagination was too lively for him to forego putting the breath of life into some of the marvelous stories he came upon.

Two years ago while searching in the British Museum for other material, Sabatini came upon a battered old volume entitled "De Americenses Zee Roovers" (The American Sea Rovers) written by a buccaneer named Exquemelin and printed in Amsterdam in 1678. This original story of freebooting on the Spanish Main was so fascinating that Sabatini determined to write a pirate novel.

A long period of searching for details followed. All to get the authentic details for a background. For, as in all Sabatini novels, history is but a background for a living love story. And in the "Black Swan" it is the love story of Priscilla Harridan, the beautiful daughter of the English Governor of the Islands, and that glamorous figure, Monsieur Charles de Bensalem, known to the buccaneers as "Top-gallant Charlie" who crossed swords in a duel to death with the most dangerous man on the coast for the honor of the woman he loved. Don't miss it! You'll admit it is the most thrilling story you have ever read. It begins tomorrow.

Goody Portion of Trains Through Here Electrified

All trains leaving Philadelphia and passing through Bristol today are operated by electricity, with those starting from Washington, D. C., having electric locomotives attached at Wilmington, Del.

It was stated by the P. R. R. that commencing today all trains on the Philadelphia-New York division would be operated electrically. This is part of Pennsylvania's $100,000,000 electrification project. But throughout the morning the trains leaving New York were in the majority pulled by steam engines. Some trains from Pittsburgh, coming onto this line, were also drawn by steam engines.

It is expected that within a few days all trains through here will be electrically drawn.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1933

HANDICAPPED

If the condition of the eyes of American school children is as bad as pictured by the Guild of Prescription Opticians of America, the situation demands immediate attention from school administrators, teachers and parents. There should be no neglect of children's eyes and poverty should deprive no child of proper examination and treatment.

It is the opinion of the organized opticians that 2,100,000 school children are retarded in their studies because of defective vision. Because the cost of teaching the backward child is greater than that of teaching the normal pupil, it is estimated impaired sight is costing the school system of the nation $135,000,000 a year. This, of course, is only conjectural.

Of all the organs of the human body the eye is the most sensitive and gets the most work to do. Since man learned to read, began to work with his eyes and substituted artificial light for natural light, the increase in cases of eye strain has been tremendous.

As far as the schools are concerned there has been great improvement in recent years. The eyes of every child are carefully examined periodically and where the parent cannot pay for needed treatment and glasses the schools in some cities furnish them. This work is saving eyes and reducing education costs.

One important phase of this work the parent must do alone is the care of the eyes of children below school age. Doubtless, there are many children whose optical troubles have been corrected before reaching school age.

DANGER IN TIRES

It has been pretty well established that the rear right tire is the first to wear out, the rear left next, the front right next and the front left last of all.

As a result, practice has become almost general to shift the worn out rear tires to the front wheels with the idea of evening up the wear.

This, however, is dangerous. When a worn tire blows out on a rear wheel, while the car is traveling at a high rate of speed, the driver still has enough control of the front wheels to guide the car safely out of a dangerous skid.

When, however, a front tire lets go, and the car is moving fast, there is almost nothing the driver can do. The steering is thrown out of his control, the car is forced into a serious skid and there is great possibility of injuries to all in the car.

Rather leave a worn out tire on a rear wheel, even though it will wear down so much faster, than risk the dangers that go with changing it to the front. For greater safety, however, a tire that shows the first mark of a tread worn down to the fabric should be taken off and used only as a spare.

Even as a spare, it should be in use only long enough to get a good replacement.

No self-made man ever left out the working parts.

Misery loves company. They come and go together.

One trouble with most drivers is that they think too lightly of the ounce of prevention.

HOLLYWOOD.

Carole Lombard

Dave Allen, head of Central Casting Bureau, has just given me a look at his report for 1932, and it contains some chilling facts.

For instance, only 205 men and women worked two or more days a week last year. One hundred and eighty-two of these were the first-line dress extras—the ones you see in swank party scenes.

These aristocrats of the atmosphere people must maintain wardrobes far greater than the average person. The men must have tuxedos, full dress, riding habit, several business suits, light and dark overcoats. The women must have light and dark evening gowns, a dinner gown, sports outfits, riding habits, street and afternoon clothes.

In 1932, these favored few averaged 223 days work a week. Their average salary was $24.90.

And, for you parents who think your boy is a second Jackie Cooper—only 10 per cent of the children registered with the bureau got as many as 10 days work during the entire year.

Thanks to heavy production since August, the bureau placed 214,000 extras in 1932, a gain of almost 25,000 above the 1931 total. On the other hand, the average daily wage dropped from $9.32 to $8.65. The reason for this drop is the increased demand for $3 extras. In 1931, the bureau placed only 718 of these low wage-earners. In 1932, the total jumped to 9533. Such extras are not even called individually. The bureau simply gets in touch with relief agencies and tells them in Darby with friends.

Mrs. Henry L. Lovett recently spent a day in Philadelphia.

Mrs. William Donnell and Miss Vera Donnell, Bristol, were Monday visitors of Mrs. W. W. Blinn.

Miss Mabel Deitrick, Moorestown, N. J., Miss Leighow, Lenny Palmer, Danville, were guests several days of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Dietrich.

Miss Lida Wilson was a Sunday visitor of Miss Claudine Fretz, Quakertown.

Charles Effinger, Edgely, and E. H. Shoemaker have returned from a trip to Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Booz entertained Sunday at dinner, Leslie Craven, Hathboro. Miss Alice Booz and Miss Helen Booz.

C. Willis Hiltz and T. Elias Prant are improving the appliances of their buildings with paint.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Shoemaker were Sunday visitors of Mrs. Shoemaker's aunt, Mrs. Jennie Woolston, New Garden.

how many people are needed.

What about the 1933 outlook for extras?

Allen says it depends largely upon the success of such pictures as "Cavalcade," "Farewell to Arms," "State Fair" and "Sign of the Cross." If they go over, the studios will gamble on more big pictures.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE:

The man who used to change the names on the doors has a real job now. Mounted on a steel scaffolding yesterday, he was scrapping the "Paramount Public Corporation" off the front of this studio. Under the receivership, it will read "Paramount Products, Inc."

Lillian Harvey is seeing Hollywood night-life with Ernst Lubitsch. She was dancing with him at the Beverly Wilshire supper-room. Incidentally, you should see the cream-colored stream-line racing car that the Fox star brought over from Germany. And she can trust the chauffeur because he is a relative. . . . Connie Bennett has a new fad for Spanish, gypsy and Italian photographs. She plays them constantly in her dressing-room. . . . If Paramount will let her, Frances Dee wants to make a picture in England. Frances has never been to New York even, and the travel urge is strong upon her. Wonder if Richard Wallace will make that picture in England. He has an offer to direct Jeannette MacDonald and Herbert Marshall.

Frances Dee

Marlene Dietrich is his companion. Yesterday, she wore skirts, a costume for "The Song of Songs." Necks craned. . . . Gene Raymond and Loretta Young have been sneaking away from the studio to lunch together at Armstrongs in Beverly Hills.

DID YOU KNOW—

That Paul Lukas was an aviator in the Hungarian Air Corps during the war?

CHAPTER FIFTY-EIGHT

A narrow path came out of the wood, a ribbon of footpaths that had looked each other in the snow. It looked a lonely place for such a path, with the great white moor waiting for the moon.

Two figures emerged from the shadows, walked the straight tree-trunks, walked some fifty paces, and then turned to look at the sunset. The man's figure stood out gaunt, black, and tall. The girl beside him was wrapped in a scarlet cloak, and her white face looked out from the oval of the upturned hood. They were beyond the long shadows thrown by the pine wood on the snow, standing very close together.

"Look at the bits of yellow light between the trunks of the trees. They are like the windows of a church on a dark night."

"The sun's going, Jess. Come along; I am not going to let you stay out after dusk."

"But it's your last day here, John."

"Is that your reason why I should let you catch cold?"

He swung her round with one arm over her shoulders, and they walked with their faces turned towards the grey east.

"I am glad it was like this, John, and not rain and a wet sky."

"It makes the memory more vivid."

They walked on in silence, Jess sunk in a reverie—the white world before her. She was striving to see the future as she desired to see it, both for herself and for the man.

"John, I want to ask you a question."

"Well?"

"Are you sure you don't regret it all that happened in Navestock?"

"Quite sure."

"I don't think I was ever so miserable in my life as when you told me they had taken away my career. Oh, it was mean! Every morning I wake up, and say to myself, 'It was my fault. I have spoiled his career.'"

"Say something else for a change."

"But in your heart of hearts, John—"

The arm over her shoulders drew her closer.

"Jess, you have given me the biggest uplift I have ever had in life. I suppose I am an ambitious man. I see now that in a few years I might have been like a bear in a cage if I had stayed down yonder. The bigger the thing we set ourselves to do, the better we do it."

"You can't help being ambitious."

He looked down at her with a light in his eyes.

"Hardly."

"No, I mean—"

"I want to give you a life you can be proud of, so that other people may envy you a very little."

"John, dear lad! But envy—"

"It is one of the finest spices in life. To see your enemies look down and savage."

"What, you feel that? I have felt it for you. Was it wrong?"

"I don't think so."

The chimneys of Moor Farm sent up a film of smoke above the tangled branches of the orchard trees. The tops of the two eucalyptuses still caught the sunlight.

"I know you will succeed, John. I have no doubts at all."

He said very quietly and without arrogance: "Yes, I shall succeed."

They came to the end of the holly hedge, and turned for a last time to look at the sunset. The level splendour beat upon their faces—the man's gaunt, confident, adventurous; the girl's, proud and full of a smiling valour.

John walked out of the new red-brick station at Navestock and found an open carriage drawn by a couple of grey waiting for him in the road. A manservant touched his hat, held out a hand for Wolfe's bag, and opened the carriage door.

"Dr. Wolfe, sir?"

"Yes."

The red-brick railway station had been built in one of the greys meadows, and as the two greys went at a fast trot along the road between the willows, Wolfe turned and looked back at Navestock town.

The Lombard poplars close by the house, where old Josiah Crabbe had lived, still towered up into the blue. The town was the same red-roofed, deliberate old place with Peachey Hill and Turrell's brewery dominating the two main quarters like the strongholds of high-handed Roman nobles.

Wolfe smiled, and turned his eyes towards Moor Farm. There were the two cypresses in the distance, and the familiar outlines of Tarring, Moor, but the old life had broken away from there and had become a mere memory.

Before him rose the cedars of "Pardons," the oaks and beeches in the park, the red chimneys, the black-pew hedges. He could see the flash-pens flashing in the sunlight, and the Alderney cows grazing in the meadows beyond.

The carriage carried him up the drive and over the house. It struck him as a dream-house that had been sleeping all these years while the seasons came and went and the leaves burgeoned—changed and fell.

He found himself walking upon the oak staircase and thinking of the day when he had been called in to set young Aubrey Brandon's leg. A door opened showing him a large room full of a mellow light that made the sheen of the polished furniture and the colours in the carpet and on the walls look rich and warm. A nurse was standing by a window. A grey-haired man rose from a chair, bowed to Wolfe, and then held out a hand.

Wolfe's eyes wandered towards the bed, and he saw Ursula Brandon smiling at him. Her face looked as pale and her hair as miraculously as ever, but there were lines of pain about her mouth, and crowsfeet about her eyes.

"I am so glad you have come. This is Dr. Phipps of Wannington. You may just remember him."

"Yes, quite well."

The elder man looked pleased. Half an hour later Ursula Brandon was lying back upon her pillows with the look of one who was experiencing a feeling of intense relief. She glanced at the nurse and smiled, and the nurse smiled back at her. Dr. Phipps and Wolfe were talking in undertones in the next room.

"You think she will be all right?"

"I am practically certain of it."

"I will write—should any other symptoms arise. I am very glad to have met you here."

The country practitioner shook hands and departed, and Wolfe returned to the other room. Ursula Brandon had said something to the nurse, for she went softly out, closing the door after her.

"Do you know, I feel at once that you are an old friend."

"I'm glad."

"Some people make one feel like that. Come and sit down here, and talk."

Wolfe drew up a chair, and the light from one of the windows fell upon him. Womanwise she was studying him, noting every subtle detail, whether there were any lines on his broad forehead, any reticence in his eyes. He had changed very little, save that there were some grey hairs about his temples, and his clothes were well cut.

I felt that I must have you to see me. I was getting anxious about myself. And I have always had great faith in you, in spite of the fact that you are one of the big men."

He smiled at her.

"This is the first time I have been in Navestock since—"

"Yes—twelve years! Good heavens! And Aubrey is with his regiment in India—and I—"

"I don't think you have altered much."

"Now, that's charming of you. Nor have you—only—somehow—you look bigger."

She met his eyes and held them.

"I sent for the truth. I know you can tell the truth. So many of these doctors—"

"Yes—"

"Do you think I shall get well?"

"Tell me."

He answered without hesitation.

"In my opinion you will, most certainly."

Something seemed to relax within her, some cord of strain. Her face became younger, smoother, more peaceful. She looked towards the windows and sighed.

"Life is good. I used not to care much whether I lived or not, but now—I have found out some of the secrets. Tell me all about yourself—and Jess."

Wolfe's eyes appeared to fill with light.

"We had our struggle, and I think it made us all the happier. Jess has a little country place now down near Guildford where the youngsters make hay and ride an old pony and pester their grandmother. Harley Street? Oh, yes, I get away when I can, or rather I should say, 'we.' I don't think we care much for the social side of things; we're much too interested in real life. I have to work pretty hard, and I like to be with her and the children."

Ursula Brandon was regarding him intently.

"Yes, I can see it all. You are one of the rare men who marry the right woman, and continue to think her just the one woman in the world."

He met her eyes and smiled.

"I have had plenty of excuses. She has helped me more than I can tell you."

"Yes, but what a blessing that you had the strength to answer such a challenge."

"You mean—?"

She spoke very softly, almost to herself.

"The challenge of such a love. Most men fail us. So often that it is the tragic side of life for women."

Wolfe appeared to reflect a moment.

"I don't think we were ever pulling our happiness to pieces to see if it was the same as ever."

"Oh, you direct, happy, purposeful people!"

"Besides, life has been too full. We had to struggle, and we went up the hill together."

His eyes shone out suddenly, and she saw that life had softened him, rubbed away some of the rough and fanatical edges.

"By George, I wish you could see the youngsters. I think you would like the little beggars."

Her pale face flushed, but he was looking out of the window at the cedars, and he did not see it.

"Your wife shall bring them down here this summer. Yes, and I think you ought to come, too, if you can spare a few days. You must explore Navestock. You will find a better man."

"For the better?"

"I think so. You know, you started the new tradition, and even the Turrells could not kill it. Josiah Crabbe and I became quite good friends before he died."

"Someone kept the tradition alive."

He looked down at her and smiled, and her eyes flashed up to his with sudden strange pride.

"Yes, I kept it alive. What is more, it kept me alive, also."

WOOL IS POPULAR IN PARIS FOR BOTH DAY AND EVENING WEAR

Odd - Looking Jackets Are
Knitted in a Trellis
Design

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS.—Wool is worn at all hours of the day and night this winter.

There are new woolen blouses in fine basketweave, with collars and cuffs embroidered on like lace and make especially "smart wear" for bridge. A black jumper has black and white collar and a blue one a rust and beige. A cardigan like a short jerkin fastens high at the throat and is finished with a short frill at the waist and on the cuffs.

Odd-looking are short jackets knitted on old woolen frames in a trellis design, with long sleeves. For cold days in the country come jumper suits of wool knit with wavy patterns in winter colorings and side fastenings.

House trousers of finest wool are made with wide legs and vertical tuckings on the hips and a wide top band with a row of buttons in the color of the fabric at each side. They are often of navy-blue or black and have bright-colored or striped tops.

Wool shawls or capes are an old fashion made modern. A "Granny" shawl modernized for the young is made with a pointed back crossed over in front and tied below the point at the back. It comes in bright colored stripes.

Short capes come in wool for shoulder comfort about the house. Longer ones are for out-of-doors, to wear over jacket suits and ensembles.

The new cloque crepe and wool evening gowns drape as beautifully as silk ones and are every bit as slimming in effect.

LANGHORNE

Mrs. Mary York has been visiting relatives in Bristol.

The Langhorne Community Welfare Association will hold its annual bazaar and delicatessen sale at the memorial house on Friday at 3 p. m. Donations received at one p. m. Anna N. Lukens and Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr., are chairmen.

Mrs. Russell P. Clayton, Kingston, N. Y., was a visitor of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Newbold, Friday.

Mrs. Fred Rennie, Wildwood, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. John Black, Ambler, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Black, North Wales; and Byron W. Black, Malba, L. I., were Sunday visitors of Mrs. Frank S. Black.

Charles Schaller, Stroudsburg, was a week-end visitor at the M. E. parsonage.

Mrs. David Fell will be the speaker at the next business meeting of the Langhorne Sorosis. The program will be in charge of the Civic Committee.

Mrs. Edward D. Osterhout and son Robert have been confined to their home with gripe.

BRISTOL HANDS LOSSES TO SOUTHAMPTON TEAMS

(By Oscar Corn)

Bristol High court teams the Blue and White Southampton teams a twin setback yesterday. The Strangers defeated the Southampton five 41 to 28, while the Cardinal and Gray sextet won a tight game, 22 to 20.

In the boys' game the first half was very fast played, with neither side having an advantage. It looked very much as though the final would be very close, and the victor would have to do some very superior playing. Instead the second half was very different. The game became one-sided with Bristol on the top. During the third quarter Southampton got only one point.

After being held down to the tail-end of a 9 to 11 half-time score, the Bristol girls swung into their excellent passing attack and smashed through the Southampton flanks to another victory. The winning goal was made in the last few minutes of play.

With thirteen points Santo lead the Bristol girls in scoring, while Somers scored most for Southampton. Cole and Cahall took the scoring laurels for Bristol while Gillespie and Yerkes led the Southampton quintet.

WHILE watching the Hibernians and Hawks play a game of basketball the other night, we noticed Fallon doing a real job of guarding. . . he hung so close to Kendrick, the star scorer of the Hawks that Harry was unable to do much for his team, and as a result the "Hibs" won rather handily. . . We were reminded of a rather amusing incident that happened a few years ago in a game between the Knights of Columbus and St. Ann's teams in the Lutheran Hall.

The Knights were the leading team in the circuit at the time. . . and "Coggie" Coyle was one of their best players. . . St. Ann's who was managed by John Fields instructed "Hooks" Nicols one of his guards to stay with Coyle and not let him go on a scoring spree. . . So well did Nicols stick to "Coggie's" side that during time out Coyle went to the side lines for a drink of water and when he looked around Nicols had hold of his belt fearing to let Coyle get away for a second. . . To say "Coggie" was disgusted would be putting it rather mildly.

At the present writing "Toby" Lawrence and "Reds" Bailey, forwards of the Y. M. A. basketball team, are leading the scorers of the league with 135 and 123 points, respectively. Ray Dorsey, the only colored player of the league, and a member of St. Ann's Aces, stands third with 96 points.

The recent fray between St. Ann's and Third Ward club reminded the fans of the old battles in the "rink," minus the fighting. The backer of both teams cheered lustily as their players scored a point and razzing was plentiful on both sides.

Let's Hang Out the Welcome Sign and "Strike Up the BAND"

IT'S a gala day in the old home town. The streets are dressed for dress parade. Flags fly. People line the curbs and crowd the sidewalks. Traffic stops. Then suddenly, drums . . . a whistle . . . STRIKE UP THE BAND!

You've watched the town on dress parade. You've looked forward to it. You've stood on the curb and been thrilled with the rest of us, by everything you've seen. Perhaps you've even said to your neighbor, or he to you: "This is a great old town we live in. . . Yes, sir, a GREAT OLD TOWN!"

Why have you said that? Why has your neighbor said that to you? What is it in the air that makes you GLAD to live precisely where you do? We call it CIVIC PRIDE. And that's the power that's built your town!

But wait! Must we don holiday attire and strike up the band to make ourselves realize the tremendous possibilities of our own home town?

How were our industries, our churches, our schools and stores established? How have we paved our streets and lighted our town and built our hospitals? By working together for a common cause. Citizens co-operated to make these things possible. Civic leaders, business men, and townspeople stuck together AND WORKED -- and got things done.

Today, we must work together more than ever before. We must co-operate. We who have investments in homes and businesses, in properties and securities; we who have jobs here and we who haven't -- we CANNOT move forward by standing still. We must support those who support us; help those who help us; buy from those who buy for us. Our objective is ourselves. It is our only way to move ahead.

The Bristol Courier has inaugurated what it sincerely believes to be an important factor to the future of Bristol business. It is the HOME TOWN LEAGUE, an association of home-town merchants in all lines of business, who have banded together in a common cause. They are striving to help this community -- YOUR community -- by buying and selling the products of those manufacturers who, directly or indirectly, help this town.

You will hear more about the HOME TOWN LEAGUE. Watch this paper for the facts --- the news --- about it. In the meantime, look for the sign of the HOME TOWN LEAGUE on the windows of our stores.

Complete details of the HOME TOWN LEAGUE may be had at the office of The Bristol Courier or from any member merchant
